Halifax, N. S., June 11.—Five hundred troops entrained tonight, fully equipped and steel helmeted, for duty in the Cape Breton coal fields where clashes between striking coal miners and corporation police today resulted in the death of one miner, the serious wounding of another, injuries to two score and the repulse of the police.

STRIKERS IN CONTROL OF STREETS OF CITY.

New Waterford, N. S., June 11.—Striking mine workers were in undisputed possession of the streets of this town tonight after a day of struggle in which one of their number was killed by gunfire, a second was shot and seriously wounded, and a large number of miners and police employed by the British Empire Steel corporation were injured, some of them severely.

General Manager H. J. McCann, of the corporation, and a number of officials, who were in the New Waterford power station when it was captured by strikers about noon, were missing and were believed to have sought safety in the woods. Of the force of company police which sought to defend the station, 24 were in the town jail for their own protection, several were in a hospital and the others were dispersed.

Striker Is Killed.

William Davis, a striker, was shot dead when company police opened fire to defend the power station. Gilbert Watson, also a striker, was shot through the stomach and is in a serious condition.

The trouble, the first serious dispute in a strike now three months old, began early today when officials and company police seized the power station three miles from the center of New Waterford and got up steam preparatory to starting the plant which generates power for the maintenance

CHINESE RIOTERS
KILLED IN BATTLE

Eight Killed, Several Are

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Hankow, June 12 (Friday).—Six Chinese were killed and many wounded while aiding in the defense of the British concession against thousands of rioting coolies.

A previous dispatch from Hankow, dated Thursday, reported the killing of eight rioters and the wounding of many by machine-gun fire in an attack on the British volunteer army. The above dispatch may refer to a new attack.

Rioting started Thursday evening on the Sutterfield and Shire wharf. Volunteers were mobilized, and after three hours they appeared to have the situation well in hand, without firing upon the rioters or making arrests.

Sailors landed from foreign gunboats to assist the volunteers.

Later coolies made a mass attack on the concession, whereupon the volunteers fired.

The situation is acute.

Securities Board Refuses To Revoke License of Miller

Victories in Court and Before Georgia Commission Won by Defendants
Thursday.

INJUNCTION DENIED
BY JUDGE THOMAS

Upholds Contention of Defense That State Is Without Authority To Start Proceedings.

Victories before the courts and the Georgia Securities commission were won Thursday by G. L. Miller & Co., G. L. Miller personally and other defendants when Judge E. D. Thomas denied petition for a permanent injunction against the firm, and the securities commission refused to make permanent a temporary order revoking the company's license.

Judge Thomas upheld the contention of defense counsel that there is no law on the Georgia statute books authorizing the state to start such injunction and dissolved the temporary injunction. The state immediately refiled a bill of exceptions pending trial, which automatically carries the case to the state supreme court for final adjudication.

Temporary Receivers Eugene R. Black and R. P. Jones still remain in charge of the Wynne-Claughton building and St. Andrews apartments through temporary injunctions granted creditors of the buildings on other petitions.

Suit against the Miller company and a number of other defendants concerned in construction of the Wynne-Claughton building and the St. Andrews apartments, which had been financed by bonds floated by the Miller company, was started on May 29 by Attorney General Napier under instructions from Governor Clifford Walker. At the same time the Georgia Securities commission temporarily revoked the Miller company's license to do business in this state and ordered it to show cause why the order should not be made permanent.

Defense counsel then filed a petition asking that T. B. Conner, chief examiner for the securities commission, be restrained from circulating alleged libelous and slanderous statements, damaging to the business of the Miller company. In a statement Paul Arnold, secretary of the firm, charged that Mr. Conner had exceeded his authority in telegraphing other state commissions advising them of the action that had been taken against the Miller company.

Following Judge Thomas' order granting a temporary injunction, other persons filed petitions asking for a receiver and Judge Thomas appointed Eugene R. Black and R. P. Jones temporarily.

No action was taken Thursday on any of the suits except the original one filed by the state.

The state's petition against the

PLAN ANNEXATION OF COLLEGE PARK AND OF HAPEVILLE

New Movement Launched
as Charter Revision
Committee Turns Down
East Lake Proposal.

Although the charter revision committee of city council Thursday advanced a petition to include the town of East Lake in the corporate limits of Atlanta, plans were announced which, it is hoped, will annex Hapeville, College Park, and a large section near Kirkwood to Atlanta within a short time.

If the plans can be carried out, it is claimed, about 5,000 inhabitants will be added to this city's population, together with property with an assessed value of more than $10,000,000.

With large delegations appearing for each side, the committee voted three to one to turn down the petition which would have requested the legislature to vote the question of annexation to Atlanta up to the residents of East Lake.

However, Councilman T. L. Slappy, chairman of the committee, who signed a favorable minority report, stated that, in his opinion, the people should be given an opportunity to vote on the question, and announced that he will ask general council Monday to adopt the minority report.

Action of the committee on similar petitions was favorable toward annexing a small section on Virginia Avenue between Briarcliff and Rosedale avenues, and also on several square miles near Kirkwood.

The council chamber at city hall was crowded when the East Lake petition was taken up. County Commissioner Virlyn B. Moore, representing the petitioners, told the committee that a majority of residents of East Lake desired to come into the city, and plead with the committee to give them an opportunity to vote.

Fight on Free School Books Given Backset

Committee Favors $1,000
Fee for Firms Selling
Lands Not in Georgia.

Backers of the fight to discontinue issuance of free textbooks in Atlanta schools lost the first skirmish Thursday when the charter revision committee of city council, by a vote of two to one, advanced a petition requesting the legislature to repeal the charter amendment which forces the city to furnish free books. However, the battle is expected to be continued in council Monday.

The proposed charter amendment was introduced in council several weeks ago by Councilman Ed H. Inman. At Thursday's meeting Alderman Jesse W. Armistead and Councilman T. L. Slappy voted against the movement to stop furnishing books, while Alderman Claude E. Buchanan cast his ballot for it.

At present, free textbooks are given to students of the first six grades, and it is planned to install them in seventh and eighth grades in September. According to the law, the city must buy books for two new grades each year until all classes are filled. Last year they cost the city $101,000, and it is expected that their cost this year will mount to approximately $106,000.

The committee also took a step toward protection of Georgia real estate values when it recommended to council a charter amendment providing an annual fee of $1,000 for any firm selling real estate not located in Georgia. The plan was proposed by Councilman W. E. Saunders.

Charter amendments extending jurisdiction of Atlanta's police department over the municipal airplane landing field, near Hapeville, and giving employees of the construction department authority to circulate news petitions, also were voted favorably.

While cleaning his rifle Thursday night at a camp on the Chattahoochee River, Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, of 50 West Twelfth street, pastor of the Third Baptist church, was wounded in the chest by the accidental discharge of the weapon.

The minister was carried to Grady hospital where he received medical aid. The bullet entered between two ribs and physicians decided to wait until today before probing for it. His condition is not considered seriously.

Dr. Ridley in company with his brother, Coley, was on a camping trip and it was intended to go hunting today, it was stated.

After receiving medical aid he was allowed to go home, but will return to the hospital today.

Tax Reduction Fixed at $350,000,000 to $375,000,-

Inheritance Taxes.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, June 11.—Tax revision at the coming session of congress was predicted today by Senator Smoot, of Utah, chairman of the senate finance committee, who at the time declared his opposition to any attempt at tariff revision.

As a member of the foreign debt commission he also expressed hope that the near future would bring some developments in the refunding of various foreign loans. He had received notice, he said, that the commission would meet next month to consider settlements.

"I feel certain that the surtaxes will be reduced," he said, "and have no doubt the tax will be brought down to 25 per cent and perhaps less. Some of the opponents of surtax revision at the last revision have come to agree that the best way to bring prosperity is to allow business to proceed with as little hindrance as possible. One of its great burdens is taxes. I think congress has come to the conclusion that high rates not only interfere with established business, but also prevent new enterprises."

"There is a movement starting in this state," he said, "to seek abolition of the federal inheritance taxes. It is argued that both federal government and state levy an inheritance tax, it is double taxation and tantamount to confiscation."

Growth of Atlanta Is on Solid Basis, Records Set Forth

GEORGIANS URGED TO END AGITATION FOR NEW TAXES

Former Governor Slaton
Says State Income Levy
Would Mean Double and Triple Taxation.

Georgians should stop agitation for additional state taxes, declared former Governor John M. Slaton on Thursday night in making the principal speech at a dinner at the chamber of commerce, when 22 members of the junior chamber were formally "graduated" into the senior organization.

"Don't drive away the good people who want to come to this state to invest their money," the speaker urged. "Rather let us give them assurance that they can rest secure here in their property rights, knowing that the citizens of this state will not countenance the taking away of their money through multiple and exorbitant taxation."

Mr. Large then showed, by his records, that during the past two years only a comparatively small number of Atlantans have moved to other states. The postoffice keeps careful record of all transfers and changes in addresses of persons moving out of the state or to other sections and these figures are regarded as absolutely accurate.

Former Governor Slaton declared that Georgia should not enact a state income tax. This, he said, would involve double and triple taxation and would also mean the creation of many new officeholders.

"There is a movement starting in this state," he said, "to seek abolition of the federal inheritance taxes. It is argued that both federal government and state levy an inheritance tax, it is double taxation and tantamount to confiscation."

"Yet, also in this state, there is a movement to inaugurate a state income tax. And this, if it taxed the income earned by real estate, would not only be double taxation—state and federal direct taxation—but would be triple taxation by reason of the state ad valorem tax on all property."

The former governor also pointed out that it would be necessary to fairly enforce a state income tax law,

Cartersville, Ga., June 11.—(Special)—Mrs. William H. Felton, upon her arrival home Thursday afternoon from Decatur, where she was the guest of honor at a celebration of her ninetieth birthday, had the pleasure of opening a telegram from President Coolidge, which reached her residence during her absence. In his message the president heartily felicitated Mrs. Felton and sent her most cordial and hearty greetings from himself and Mrs. Coolidge.

Democrats Will Flay G.O.P. In Coming Senatorial Drives For Yielding to 'Interests'

Foundations for Political Issue Laid on the Number of Combinations Effected Recently.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, June 11.—When Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, made a speech in Milwaukee, stressing the number of business combinations now being made and compared it with a previous era of business consolidation, he added one more to many even then existing. The point was in process of rapid crystallization about the same issue they had following the period of business combination that attended the McKinley administration.

The same crystallization is bound up by the coming session of congress of the "National Democrat," a most spritely and aggressive party periodical that was started in Washington the beginning of this month. In this second issue, the leading article is devoted to the recent decision of the Supreme Court legalizing trade associations. In this decision the "National Democrat" summarizes under the captions, "Pulls Teeth of Sherman Law" and "Let-up on Big Interests." This decision, the "National Democrat" says, has "thrown the whole trust question back into politics and perhaps furnished an outstanding issue for the next campaign."

Oldfield Names Issues.

Another article in the same issue gives the specific for the proposed minister portent to a democratic congressman, William A. Oldfield, of Arkansas. They recall that after the republicans won the election last year Congressman Oldfield made a speech predicting that the republicans would find it "by far the easiest way to unify the economic power and administrative power and administrative influence to render instant and effectual" the federal trade commission and other instrumentalities of government set up the democrats under Wilson.

Oldfield is further quoted as having made the prediction about republican treatment of the tariff commission. Since Congressman Oldfield is chairman of the democratic committee in charge of the work of electing democratic congressmen next year, his indication of the issue is rather authoritative.

National Democrats insist it is part of the party's plans next year to make a drive against republican senators, who, in a vote in the senate, seemed to express the conviction that there was nothing wrong about the leases of government oil land to Doheny and Sinclair. When Senator Walsh, as chairman of the committee that investigated these leases, brought in a majority report condemning them, a republican member of the committee, the late Senator Speer, of Missouri, brought in a minority report justifying the leases and exonerating Fall. There was a roll call and 16 republican senators, who will come up for reelection next year, voted for the excusing minority report.

Court Decision Embarrassing.

Now that a federal court has denounced the Doheny lease in severe terms, and decided it invalid, the senators who found nothing wrong in the leases are left in a position that undoubtedly will cause them more than a little embarrassment at the polls if the democratic capitalize this point, they will.

The democrats remember how ef-

DECATUR BAPTISTS PLAN NEW BUILDING

There will be a mass meeting of the congregation of the Decatur First Baptist church tonight to consider and take action upon a building proposal, and it is expected that this meeting will be followed by building activities at an early date.

Several weeks ago the church appointed a committee to devise plans for the building and financing of an adequate physical plant for the organizations and activities of the congregation. This committee is ready to submit its report to the meeting Friday night, and at that time it is proposed to set up the organization for building operations.

Four years ago this church erected an auditorium, well arranged and adapted to departmentalized Bible school work as far as its capacity goes. Since its erection the building has grown so rapidly that the building is now inadequate for the younger departments of the church. It is said that the church house sometime ago became too small to hold the congregations and for six months the services of public worship have been held in the DeKalb county courthouse as also has the department of the Bible school.

The proposed new building will provide a quarter for the departments of the Bible school, an ample auditorium for public worship, social, recreational and dining hall. With the completion of the proposed building the congregation will have a modern and commodious church plant.

Dr. A. J. Moncrief is pastor of the church.

STABBING OF WIFE DRAWS GANG TERM FOR NEGRO MAN

Elm Grove, negro. Thursday was sentenced to serve from three to five years on Fulton county chain gang by a jury in Judge Howard's division of Fulton superior court, on charges of assault with intent to murder, growing out of the stabbing of the negro's wife several days ago.

Green went on the jury and stated when he completed expiation for his crime he would return and care for the wife he had attacked and aid in rearing a number of children.

The negro fled Georgia and later was apprehended in Tennessee.

The case of James Marshall, negro, alleged slayer of John Payne, Atlanta contractor, which was filed for trial in Judge Howard's court Thursday, was continued on account of the illness of Attorney Vester M. Ownby, of the defense.

HIGHWAY AUDIT REPORT EXPECTED SOME TIME TODAY

Arrival of several thousand manila envelopes at the governor's office has been taken to indicate that the Dawson audit of the state highway department will be turned over to the governor within the next day or two.

Governor Walker announced some weeks ago that he planned to send copies of this audit to all members of the state legislature and to the state auditor. Since no action was taken when the preliminary report by Auditor Davison was printed and the envelopes received Thursday correspond in size and appearance to those used at that time.

C. R. Dawson & company, private auditing firm, was assigned to make the audit of the state highway department last February, to which place he has been invited. A special sale has been arranged under direction of H. F. Fischer, manager of the main store at 741-43 Marietta street. The branch store, at 207 Peters street, also will have a special sale in honor of the occasion. Joe Wallace is manager of the branch.

The Golden Eagle Buggy company has been engaged in business in Atlanta for about 26 years. It was last year that it was decided to add the auto accessory business and it has proven a profitable addition, according to officials. The name of the company has been changed from the Golden Eagle Buggy company to the Golden Eagle company.

Members of Fulton Lodge, No. 32, I. O. O. F., enjoyed a basket picnic and addresses by prominent Atlantans at its 25th anniversary celebration at Grant Park Saturday evening.

An address was made by John N. Stearns, noble grand elect; Rev. C. A. Ridley offered the invocation, and Newman Lasser, charter member, gave a history of the lodge. Judge L. F. McClelland spoke on the origin of the order, and Miss Alma Grand and Mrs. Delta Anderson gave readings.

Light Opera Orchestra Stars Arrive Here Early Today

Thirty members of the Metropolitan Opera company symphony orchestra will arrive in Atlanta this morning in time for a series of three ensemble rehearsals with principals and chorus to put the finishing touch on "The Mikado," which opens at the auditorium-armory Monday night, inaugurating the six weeks of Atlanta's first season of municipal light opera.

Heading the musicians will be Sverdsky, internationally noted concert and orchestra violinist, who has been assistant concertmeister of the Metropolitan Opera company and who was engaged by Paul Eisler, Metropolitan conductor, who is musical director of the Atlanta organization, to be concertmaster of the Atlanta Municipal light opera company.

The orchestra has been in rehearsal in New York for several weeks under Sverdsky to perfect itself in the music of six operas to be presented here, beginning with a full review in the score of "The Mikado" for several hours Friday morning, under the baton of Mr. Eisler, stage director, and Fred Palmer, assistant stage director.

The chorus and ballet of more than 60 Atlanta and Georgia young people have been at work steadily for nearly two months in preparation for the opening of the Atlanta Municipal light opera company.

NO ORDERS GIVEN ON ARCTIC LANDS

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, June 11.—The MacMillan expedition when it departs for the Arctic June 17. Secretary Wilbur said today, will carry no special instructions concerning the course it should pursue in claiming any lands which may be discovered or in flying over disputed territory.

The question was brought up in a letter to Mr. Wilbur from Donald B. MacMillan, president of the expedition, who asked if there were any special instructions in view of statements Ottawa indicates an interest on the part of the Canadian government in the plans for the undertaking. The letter was transmitted to the state department, but Mr. Wilbur said today no reply was expected, adding, however, that the two departments were in accord on the decision to provide no special instructions for the explorers.

It is understood to be the position of the departments that no question has been raised as to the right of the navy planes which will accompany the expedition to fly over Ellesmere Island or any other territory, including that claimed by Canada north of its generally recognized boundary line, much as an assertion of sovereignty will be raised unless land were discovered in the unexplored region to be visited by the expedition, the responsible officials also appear to feel that no necessity exists for proceeding on the theory that such discoveries may be made and that if any developments arise requiring action, it will be time enough to consider them.

3 MEN ARRESTED IN STREET BRAWL TO FACE RECORDER

A. J. Jackson, 25, of 390 Rawson street; J. C. Jones, 22, of 61 West Harris street, and W. A. Banks, 37, of 304 Washington street, were arrested Thursday night following a free-for-all fight at the Terminal station on Mitchell street, according to police.

Jackson received a bad laceration about the head; Jones a knife wound in the back, and the clothing of Banks was badly torn. The men were arrested by Patrolmen Whately and Leathers, and were carried to Grady hospital, where they were given medical aid and later placed in a cell at police headquarters on charges of disorderly conduct.

Madison, Wis., June 11.—(By the Associated Press)—The Capital Times says today that examination questions have been stolen from three University of Wisconsin buildings and sold to more than 3,000 students at $10 each.

More than 100 students were called before Dr. Scott H. Goodnight, head of the journalism department, to answer for questioning the test papers. The students, the story continues, had low class averages, but have written excellent final examinations.

Court action will be pressed against the person who committed the burglaries. Professor C. D. Sedenski, head of the romance language department, is quoted as saying.

Rotarians Expect 12,000 Delegates At Cleveland Meet

FRANCE PREPARING TO FUND DEBT SOON

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Geneva, June 11.—(By the Associated Press)—Attendance at the 16th annual convention of Rotary International, which convenes in Public Hall next Monday, will establish a new record, it was predicted today at convention headquarters.

Convention headquarters officials were more emphatic in predicting 12,000 or more would attend.

One message from the British delegation, for instance, shows that nearly 200 are coming instead of 100, as was originally understood. Another message indicates that approximately 200 delegates are coming from Japan and the Orient, a score, or more, as previously understood.

From New Zealand, Hawaii, Panama and Cuba about 50 are coming, nearly twice the number expected.

From half a dozen countries in South America, expected to furnish a dozen delegates, about 30 are en route to Cleveland, advised show.

These states produce the bulk of the country's creamery butter and unfavorable weather during May has impaired pastures so that the average condition is only rated at 70 as compared with usual average 70 at this season of the year.

Prospects in these states on June 1 were for one-fourth less hay than was harvested last year.

The police planned to question him when his condition permits in an effort to determine how the double shooting occurred.

Another student, a member of a group of a single pact, Medical Examiner George L. West, after an autopsy on the girl's body yesterday, said he was not satisfied that "it necessarily was suicide."

School authorities today issued an order prohibiting students from discussing the tragedy at any time.

he had served for many, many years the following farewell:

"We are at the end of our journey. Let us see if we could have done better. If we had had more money. We could certainly have done better. When we think over the matter, we could not have done better with the funds in hand. There is no chance that we have been good to you; I realize that I have been obedient to you all that I have undertaken, where I knew obedience would be required. You have been good to me; patient with me. I do not think there is any wish of yours which has not been carried out.

"There is no amazement in the spirit of self-reliance that is the most glorious heritage of the Anglo-Saxon race."

The meeting Thursday night was given by the chamber of commerce in honor of the members of the junior chamber who were accepted into membership in the older body by reason of having reached the age of eligibility.

Twenty-two junior members were presented their certificates of membership in the senior organization by B. S. Barker, secretary. These were Austin Abbott, R. W. Althair, Herman B. Baker, Philip Bayard, Roy G. Dickerson, Charles Franklin, G. C. Callaway, R. G. Campbell, J. M. Dean, Riley F. Elder, S. Jack Farr, G. F. Grafton, H. W. McLarty, George M. Normandy, W. A. Siron, Eugene L. Tiller, H. Jay Wallace, Harry A. Wallenstein, Dr. S. L. Davis, Fitzgibbon King, Jr., George E. Meyers, Jr., and Michael.

40 Graduated.

In addition to those there are 18 others who have previously graduated from the younger organization into the parent body, making a total of 40 who are members of both organizations. The 18 who were already members of both are: Atiba Baugh, Paul Barnes, C. E. Bowers, R. R. Blane, J. Palmer Blackburn, J. R. Bloodworth, Hoit S. Brown, M. J. Burke, B. P. Gambrell, L. R. Hunter, Roy Lee Geddy, Eugene Oberholzer, Jr., H. E. Richardson, Henry H. Robin, Horace Russell, Israel F. Saul, John M. Slaton, Jr., and Forrest E. Wysong.

W. R. C. Smith, president of the senior organization, spoke briefly welcoming the young men into the main body and assuring them that work would be found for them, so that they might continue their loyal activities for the upbuilding of Atlanta.

We must all give the best we have got," said President Smith, "to the building of a yet greater and more glorious city."

John M. Slaton, Jr., president of the junior organization, told of the success of the campaign to finance the Georgia exhibit in the Southern pavilion at the world's fair in New York and said that one part of the credit for this must be given to the members of the senior body who unselfishly helped. He told of a new $500,000 plan which is shortly to be established in this city: a direct result of this exhibition. This task will be done in a year and will be more than double the entire cost of the Georgia exhibit, he declared.

Many New Residents.

Mr. Slaton said that figures in the office of Postmaster E. K. Large showed that comparatively few Americans have left the city for other states in the last two years and that the influx of new residents has been much greater than the total of those who have left.

"Let each one of us make himself a committee of one to give the lie to any irresponsible statements about people leaving Atlanta. They just don't know what they are talking about," he declared.

Mr. Slaton also cited the new telephone directory, containing 12,000 more telephone listings than any previous directory, to prove that Atlanta's population has increased over 6,000 in the last six months.

Praises G. F. Willis.

Mr. Slaton praised the civic loyalty of G. F. Willis, who has invested his capital in developing Avondale, an Atlanta real estate subdivision, rather than putting it into real estate in another state. He also lauded the civic loyalty of the two sons of Hon. Ronald Russell, speaking on behalf of the junior chamber members who were becoming members of the senior body as well, declared that the greatest achievement of the junior body since its creation was in arousing the civic loyalty and community enthusiasm of the younger generation of citizens.

He deplored the fact that many of the young new citizens showed a tendency to attend strictly to their private concerns taking no part in city building and said that the junior chamber was building the city fathers of the future by training civic leaders of the future. He said Atlanta had today the largest number of business men who had always been ready, unselfishly to give of their time, effort and money to build the city, and the work of the junior chamber assured a constant reinforcement of this large body of loyal citizens.

Mr. Russell pledged to the senior chamber the loyalty and willingness to work of the group of new members coming in.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

When the trustees of the Georgia State College of Agriculture convened in Athens Thursday Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of that institution, submitted an annual report, compiled in an illustrated booklet of more than 100 pages, that ought to be read by every citizen of Georgia, whether directly or indirectly interested in any of the many branches of agricultural education or not.

It is illuminating as a story of what this institution is accomplishing in making better farmers, better homes, more economic wealth, finer community spirit—and in building substantial foundations for the young men and women upon whose shoulders the civic responsibilities and the material welfare of Georgia's tomorrow must rest.

It contains a full and complete statement of the work and activities of the college of agriculture for the year now closing and the introductory pages deal with many phases of the work that are of fundamental concern to the farmers of the state.

The reader will observe that the college is providing educational facilities for the boys and girls of the state at a lower cost than prevails elsewhere, and will no doubt be interested in the fine attendance record.

The growth of the club work is delineated. The publications are recorded. The statement of the college farm is made in detail. What the college is doing for the state is set forth. What other states are doing for their institutions of higher learning and what the particular needs of this institution may be are recorded. A resume of what the college has done for its constituency during the last 18 years is set forth. A financial statement is included, and in the final words Dr. Soule pays a forceful and touching tribute to Chancellor Barrow.

This report, which is in reality a history, and a masterful treatise upon Georgia's farm and rural conditions and prospects and hopes, will no doubt be furnished without cost to those who will be interested, and it is of such vital concern that the demand should quickly exhaust the supply.

As to Georgia being the lowest in cost to the state of agricultural education, Dr. Soule's report makes the following comparisons:

"The income of this institution per student from all sources during 1921-1922 approximated $128. In Florida this figure became $246; in South Carolina, $351; in North Carolina, $355; in West Virginia, $375; in Virginia, $645. Even in the little state of Delaware the expenditure per student by the state was $432. In other words, the cost to the state per agricultural student in Georgia was only a little more than 50 per cent of what it was in Florida; while in Virginia the cost to the state per student instructed was almost five times as great as it was in Georgia. According to these figures there is no other state in our class in so far as economy in the instruction of its bona fide students is concerned. This would appear to be the best and only evidence needed to show that the Georgia State College of Agriculture has been efficiently managed and handled by the very capable board of trustees, under whose authority it is operated."

During the past five years the farmers of Georgia have passed through a period of great trial and hardship. Under these conditions it was natural to suppose there would be a declination in the number of students attending the various colleges of agriculture. This appears to be true of practically all the institutions of this class in the United States, except in Georgia. The record of attendance upon this institution shows a steady gain throughout the 10-year period, beginning in 1913-1914 and ending in 1924-1925. The increase upon long courses during this time has been at the rate of 115 per cent.

The Georgia State College of Agriculture is properly credited therefore with having a larger bona fide group of students pursuing degree courses than any of the states contiguous. This is the best evidence of the benefits which the training courses offered through the agency of this institution will confer upon the sons and daughters of our farmers which is adducible. It shows also that the institution is not only firmly established in the affections of the farmers, but that it is also rapidly growing in public esteem. It is also interesting to know that the attendance upon the college in proportion to the worth of farm products is high when averaged for the United States. On the other hand income per student and the property value per student as supplied from state sources are low; whereas, the number of students per instructor is high.

There were 2,427 individuals enrolled in the various courses offered on the campus at Athens during the collegiate year 1924-1925. Of this number, 772 were pursuing the long courses, and 1,655 the short courses. One thousand two hundred and fifty visitors attended Farmers' week and the county agents' conference who are not included in this statement. The major part of those attending resident-short courses were in attendance upon Camp Wilkins.

Nothing has been undertaken in the history of the college that promises to be of greater importance to the future of Georgia than the opening of this institution. It is entirely unique in conception, plan and purpose. It is confidently believed that 2,000 boys and girls will be reached through its agency this year, thereby portraying to them the purpose and possibilities of higher education and the necessity for their developing themselves into leaders, capable of serving the state in an acceptable manner. Since the college was first organized in 1908, 6,080 individuals have been enrolled in the long courses and 8,243 in the short courses; making a total of 14,323 men and women who have passed through its portals during the last 18 years. This, of itself, constitutes a unique record for institutions of this type.

Of the institution's financial situation Dr. Soule says:

"Our income was slightly increased by the legislature last summer. It now stands at $92,500.00, exclusive of the $5,700.00 received from the Rockefeller foundation. It is self-evident that the funds made available for the maintenance are quite inadequate to enable us to provide additional facilities and equipment and acceptably serve so large a student body. Improvisation has been carried to the highest degree possible. There is an imperative need for making substantial repairs to the physical plant, increasing the number of instructors and enlarging the scientific and technical laboratories. It is manifest that these things cannot be accomplished without a marked increase in our maintenance fund. Unless this increase is received, it is obvious that the college must stand still or go backward. It only has the choice, under existing conditions, between stagnation and vegetation."

This is an appeal that should ring not only in the ears, but in the hearts and consciences of every member of the Georgia assembly. This great institution is doing a marvelous service for the state. Shall it stand still or go backward?" It must go forward!

"UNCLE DAVE" BARROW. The voluntary retirement of "Uncle Dave" Barrow from the chancellorship of the university, which he has served so long and faithfully, casts a shadow of genuine sadness over the state.

No man is more deeply or more generally loved.

No man has rendered to his state, throughout the long years of his executive management of the university, a more potential or a finer or a more lasting service.

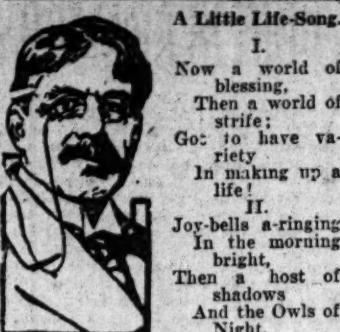

His great tact in handling young men, his profound learning, his personal gentleness, his high Christian character, his big responsive heart, and his outstanding ability as an executive—all of these factors contribute in making of him a remarkable man among men—

And in his retirement from the active duties of a university executive in order that he may more calmly and serenely enjoy the beautiful sunset of a useful life, the sincere heartfelt sorrows of his hosts of friends, and of all friends of the university, are softened only by the fact that he will remain at the scene of his labors as chancellor emeritus—

And the contact with the institution that he loves and that reflects so beautifully his own ideals, will not be broken—and will be broken only when "God shall call him home."

I.
Now a world of blessing,
Then a world of strife;
Got to have variety
In making up a life!
II.
Joy-bells a ringing
In the morning bright,
Then the host of shadow
And the Owls of Night.
III.
Lessons for the learning,
Thorns along the way;
With but the dream of May.
IV.
But for this the solace—
The song, born of the sigh:
Love came to meet us
And made a morning sky.

Sleeping On.

"Keep the Tifton Gazette," says the Tifton Gazette, and quotes this paragraph from a contemporary:

"This is the season when the average country merchant lets up in his advertising and when the mail-order house begins to get in its deadliest work, remarks the Walton Tribune, to understand that it pays to advertise during the summer season, but the mail-order house knows that the best time for it to go after business is when the merchant is asleep on the job."

Captured.

Good Times knock at the door,
Said the boy, come to spend the day;
But we'd heard that word before,
Wouldn't let 'em go back!
Just surrounded 'em! and so
Never had a chance to go!

Fair Notice.

No one can say that, from the Chicago Tribune, isn't giving the public notice.

"The editor of the Emporia Gazette stated the other day that an editor, outside of Topeka, had recently turned down an offer of a million and a half dollars for his newspaper plant. He mentioned no names; added for the country of origin, all the slick book agents, all the indigent old college chums, all the busy solicitors for college endowments, Florida real estate agents, wildcat oil lease hounds and the million and one other varieties of artists skilled in separating easy marks from their pockets, got the big idea and began to float it about this way, this editor wishes to let it be known that Colonel Bill was not referring to him."

Red Hot!

Evidently somebody was mad when the following fiery lines flashed into the poetry column of The Adams Eagle:

"Storm-tongue, storm-tongue,
What you goin' to do
When no one's left to listen
To the fiery tongue of you?
When you're faint, and out o'
Having talked the world to death,
And not a partial prospect
Of another world in view?"

Getting Even At Last.

Here's a unique suggestion from the Lancaster Standard:

"Suppose the women got to leaving the really vital facts of their married lives to put on their tombstones. Did you ever think of it? You'd be constantly running on to inscriptions that read like this: Here lies Mrs. L. wife of Simon Jones, aged 67 years, when her death Simon died before her death. Simon died before her set a silver spoon. She died without getting them. Thirty-nine years before she passed hence he told her she'd get her a new cool stove. The last meal she got was the same old stove. Just after he married her he told her as soon as on the front of her feet he'd buy her a washing machine. Her back still ached, as she was dying, from a big washing traced up and down her body."

The Reason.

Thunder growin' round the sky,
That's why lightning's on the fly;
Even in heaven you couldn't stay!
If even the old saints growled away!"

THE CONSTITUTION, ATLANTA, GA., FRIDAY, JUNE 12, 1925.

Just in Passing
BY JAMES A. HOLLOWAY

The spirit of popular thought—to drift away from creedism with a corresponding tendency toward a protestant merger—has been magnificently illustrated in Canada by the amalgamation of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational denominations.

It is a big and splendid idea. It might be called an "experiment," but that would be doing injustice to the underlying, bed-rock principle of the Christian religion. Surely creeds do not make religion—the genuine religion of "Jesus Christ, crucified for the salvation of the world." Often they destroy, or at least impair real religion and far too often do they destroy the usefulness of the church.

Creedism is too often carried to the extent of fanaticism.

Some of the greatest crimes in world history have been committed on the altar of creedal bigotry.

The horrible story of the dark mid-ages—a starless night of a thousand years' duration—was the result of intellectual serfdom, and of creedal dogmatism.

The dawn came with the reformation—and only when intellectual slavery was planted.

Too many churches of the Protestant faith are more deeply embedded in politics than in Christianity. It is hurting Christianity.

In New York city two great Baptist ministers are at each other's throats like wild beasts of a jungle. One of them is a native Georgian. It comes out of the modernist and fundamentalist scrap. The Presbyterian church is having its factional rows. The Methodists are split in an excusable fight over the proposed unification of the northern and southern branches.

And yet the churches of all these faiths sing the praises of the same Jehovah, and define one code of moral law to follow.

The Ten Commandments are set up by Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians and the sundry other denominations that accept the Bible as the fundamental guide of life.

No minister of any Protestant church will claim more than one path to heaven.

No interpreter of the tenets of the Christian religion will differ in the fundamental.

The proper service of God to meet the requirements of the Christian religion is prescribed for all churches alike. Then, as there is but one God and one goal for those who are earnestly desirous of so living as to inherit that goal, bequeathed by God to those who follow Him, why should there be so many creedal differences to cast a cloud of confusion and mystery across the one and only way?

The Canadian movement is right; and the world will have to come to that view before the religion of Jesus Christ can have a fair chance in the world, represented in Greater Georgia, Inc.

We need to get away from the very thought of religious intolerance—and some of the most pronounced is among the churches of Protestant faith.

God speed the day for a broader spirit of intellectual and religious liberty!

Talking about tolerance—

I was at a banquet of the National Order of Pipe Smokers Wednesday evening, tendered to the grand lodge by our good Smoker Vaughan.

From the days of the ancient Athenian and Egyptian civilizations the pipe throughout the world has been the symbol of tolerance and peace and justice and truth.

American democracy was cradled around the Indian campfire, with the pipe of peace serving its useful purpose in solidifying the spirit and letter of popular government.

At the banquet Dr. Grant, the president, delivered a ringing address on the greatness of Atlanta, urging a new consecration and a greater love for and faith in Georgia and her wonderful opportunities.

Toaster Zimmer read the following beautiful lines in setting forth the principles of the order—

"The pipe is for the man who has earned his rest,

Who's work entitles him to share in the best

Of life's respite, when the day's work is done—

Or a smoke or two before it's begun—

The man who's contributed something worth while,

Who tackles his problems with song and smile,

And leaves for the fellow who'll finish his work

No trace of a slacker, coward or shirk.

"So we'll pledge by our pipes that we'll try with our might

To stand four square and play the game right,

That we'll lighten life's burdens, wherever we can,

Bee proud because we're a pipe-smoking man;

But we check short—should fall by the way—

Should muddle up justice—fail in fair play—

We can trust a tribunal of pipe-smoking men

State Agricultural School Is Operated at Low Cost, Soule Declares in Report

Report Shows Each Student Educated at State Agricultural College Costs State Only $128.

Athens, Ga., June 11.—Educational facilities for boys and girls of Georgia can be obtained at a lower cost than prevails in many other southern states relative to agricultural schools, while there has been noted a steady gain in enrollment, according to the 18th annual report of the State College of Agriculture, submitted to the board of trustees of the institution at their annual meeting here today by Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president.

"It is particularly gratifying to be able to report that we are still making substantial progress in the proper direction," said the report. "Unless all signs of the times fail, several distinct new movements are gradually taking shape in Georgia. These are destined to affect the future welfare of the state very materially. They are being evidenced in various ways, but in none more clearly than through the development of a higher and better public consciousness, and a more general interest in the common welfare which relate to and affect the welfare of our educational institutions."

"This evidence," said the report of Dr. Soule, "means that the hour for the inauguration of a great forward educational movement throughout the length and breadth of our commonwealth is at hand."

Commenting on the fact that "we have passed through a hard and trying period in Georgia," the report says:

"Two paralyzing afflictions fell upon us coincidentally. The first was a resultant of the world war; the second was due to the invasion of our state by the boll weevil. No commonwealth in the entire union was called upon to meet two more severe and disconcerting economic dis-

Low Cost Record.

Concerning the cost of education at the State College of Agriculture being at a lower cost than in many other institutions of similar nature in various states, the report says that this is the most significant evidence of the value of the service work being rendered the state through the agency of this institution."

Data, compiled by an independent agency in Washington, says the report, shows that the income of the agricultural college per student "from all sources" during the 1921-22 approximated $1,200.

"In Florida," continues the report, "this figure was $246; in South Carolina, $351; in North Carolina, $535; in West Virginia, $578; in Virginia, $645. Even in the state of Delaware the expenditure per student by the state was $432. In other words, the average cost of an agricultural student in Georgia was only a little more than 50 per cent of what it was in Florida; while in Virginia the cost to the state per student instructed was almost five times as great as it was in Georgia.

"According to these figures, there is no other state in our class so far as economy in the instruction of its agriculture students is concerned.

That would appear to be the best and only evidence needed to show that the Georgia State College of Agriculture has been efficiently managed and handled by the capable board of trustees under whose authority it is operated."

The report shows further that considering the fact that Georgia farmers have paid through a period of "green trair and hardship" during the past five years, this did not tend to cause a decrease in the number of students. On the other hand, the record of attendance at the institution "shows a steady gain throughout the years from 1913-14 and ending in 1921-1925."

It is shown that there were a total of 2,427 students enrolled in the various courses offered at the college during 1924-25, and of this number 772 were pursuing the long courses and 1,655 the short courses.

Concerning financial affairs, the report shows that the income of the report made funds of $80,500 exclusive of the $50,000 received from the Rockefeller Foundation. It is self-evident that the funds made available for the maintenance are quite inadequate to enable us to provide additional facilities and equipment and acceptably serve so large a student body. Improvisation has been carried to the highest degree possible.

"There is an imperative need for making substantial repairs to the physical plant, increasing the scientific and technical facilities, which is manifest that these things cannot be accomplished without a marked increase in our maintenance fund. Unless this increase is received it is obvious that the college must stand still or go backward. It only has the choice, under existing conditions, between stagnation and decline."

"The experiment stations have gathered together and put into use form great stores of concrete information relating to agricultural and the home-making industries," says the report.

Relative to various demonstrations of the use of the airplane for dusting cotton with calcium arsenate in fighting the boll weevil, the report says that at all these trials those attending "were fully convinced of the adequacy of this method of distributing calcium arsenate and were surprised at the rapidity with which large areas could be covered."

"Georgia has about 10,000,000 acres of land under the plow at the present time," the report shows. "This is

Eagle on German Coat of Arms :: POST-REVOLUTION EMBLEM ROUNDLY CRITICIZED :: Too Ugly, Says Reichstag Head

Berlin, June 11.—(By the Associated Press.)—The federal eagle on the German coat of arms is too ugly to suit the German nationalist Reichstag floor leader, George Schmitz.

Declaring that the reopening of the institution affords greater importance to the future of the state than any other thing, the report shows that since the college was organized 18 years ago a total of 14,323 men and women have attended the college.

Fay Roads.

Declaring that good roads are imperative to the farmer, the report states that "Georgia is making wonderful progress in road building. The mileage of paved highways is increasing rapidly. It would be an economic advantage to farmers especially to have paved roads along the touristic routes but as a network connecting county seats and all principal towns throughout the state. A permanent pavement of good construction lowers the maintenance cost to such an extent that it is a true economy."

Regarding boys' and girls' club work, the report shows that in the year 1924 a total of 19,575 boys and girls from the farms received vocational training through club work, as compared with 2,000 in 1910, an increase last year over 1910 of 7,575 members. The average is approximately 1,25 boys and girls from each county in the state.

In 1924 the value of crops grown by members of the various clubs was estimated at $564,000 as compared with a value of $80,000 in 1910. In the entire period from 1910 to 1924 a total of 248,357 boys and girls were engaged in club work, and the entire value of their crops, for the same period amounted to $10,340,641.

NEW INSTITUTES FOR U. S. SAILORS URGED BY FROST

Captain Paul J. Frost, superintendent of the Seamen's institute, with headquarters in Jacksonville, Fla., Thursday presented a detailed report of his work among merchant seamen to the Baptist Home Mission board, under whose direction the institute is operated.

Tentative plans for opening similar institutes in Miami, and Havana, Cuba, were offered at the board meeting by Captain Frost, who explained the length of the need for such work in the two ports—particularly in Havana.

The Seamen's institute is established for the purpose of providing suitable religious and social surroundings for the sailors when they enter port and are substituted in a foreign port for lost home ties. Captain Frost pointed out. In addition to this, it seeks to furnish a clean, wholesome place for the men to stay during leaves of absence from their ships.

BISHOP CANDLER SPEAKS SUNDAY AT NEW CHURCH

Bishop Warren A. Candler will preach at 11 o'clock Sunday morning at the new Peachtree Road Methodist church.

Sermons by various prominent Atlanta pastors are being heard every night of this week at the new church. Rev. L. L. Jones, presiding elder of the North Atlanta district, has attended every service.

Services will be held tonight and Saturday night at 8 o'clock.

The church was organized in the home of Dr. and Mrs. M. T. Salter last April, and since that time a lot has been bought on Peachtree Road and a temporary tabernacle erected until the new building is ready.

The Sunday school has been organized by Rev. E. H. Wood as superintendent.

The 12 month's sentence was suspended on payment of the fine.

OFFICERS FACE TRIAL AT MEETING TONIGHT

Several important matters, including trials of two policemen charged with interfering with state witnesses in a murder case, will come before the police committee of City Council at tonight's meeting. The session originally was set for Wednesday, but owing to absence from the city of Councilman Ed H. Inman, chairman, was postponed until tonight.

Policemen S. T. McGarity and W. D. Baldwin will be tried on charges of interfering with witnesses in the trial of Will Robinson, Negro, who was recently convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment for murder.

Relative to various demonstrations of the use of the airplane for dusting cotton with calcium arsenate in fighting the boll weevil, the report says that at all these trials those attending "were fully convinced of the adequacy of this method of distributing calcium arsenate and were surprised at the rapidity with which large areas could be covered."

Age of Buildings Ordered Considered in Tax Levies By Appeals Board Decision

Business Changes and Conditions, Including Traffic, Also Declared To Be Factor.

Washington, June 11.—(By the Associated Press)—The United States board of tax appeals, in a decision that is expected to have a far-reaching effect on federal taxation in many cities, ruled today that the doctrine of business, due to the swift change of business centers common to American communities constitutes a legal deduction from the gross income of the property owners for taxation purposes.

The decision was reached in a case from Chicago, but it was described as applicable to scores of other cities and was accepted as meaning that the board recognizes the value of location to business or industry as an economic factor along with general depreciation such as wear, tear and exhaustion of property.

Revolving Fund Ordered.

In deciding the case, the board not only established what is believed to be a precedent but disposed of 30 appeals, simultaneously reversed the findings of the internal revenue bureau and ordered a recalculation of the taxes involved on the basis of its ruling.

It fixed the allowance for wear, tear and exhaustion and obsolescence in this instance at 3 per cent a year, calculating the reasonable life of the buildings involved at a little more than 33 years.

Another phase of the decision which aroused interest here was the suggestion contained in the board's discussion of the case, that motor traffic in many larger cities must be considered an important factor in weighing property values. Mention was made in the case of the traffic on State street at Chicago, and it was asserted that the suggestion had caused shoppers to seek stores in localities where use of automobiles was less difficult.

Traffic Also Is Factor.

The two structures involved in the case decided were the North American mercantile buildings on State street.

"At the time the buildings were erected," the board's statement said, "State street was the principal retail department store and high grade shopping district of Chicago. Commerce and automobile traffic on State street has so increased as to cause shoppers to find stores in less congested localities. As a result, the high grade shops formerly located on State street have gradually removed to Michigan avenue and adjacent territory."

The North American building has three stories, an annex, a space which was formerly rented to tenants for retail stores, for which it was constructed, has been changed over for occupancy of loft tenants, from whom rental is received at only 50 to 75 per cent of that paid by retail tenants."

dict had been reached, Judge John B. Hutchens, before whom the case was tried, sentenced Bell and defendant court until Friday morning.

Bell today admitted to the jury that he shot Gentry, saying when the case in which he and a companion were being tried for robbery at Atlanta was stopped by Gentry and a fellow officer, he ran behind a sign board and shot Gentry as he approached the spot where he was hiding. He displayed injuries on his body he stated were caused by shots fired by Gentry when he ran from the car.

He also agreed he testified that he was Bell's companion in the fatal trip, substantiated the statement of Bell, saying they were transporting a load of liquor to Atlanta, and deserted the car when commanded to stop by officers and that the next he heard of the case was when he was arrested at his home in Atlanta in connection with the robbery killing.

Ed Holcomb, the officer who was with Gentry the day of the shooting, testified that when the two negroes left the car he chased Harrell and that Gentry followed Bell, and that it was after he had abandoned the spot where he was hiding. He displayed injuries on his body he stated were caused by shots fired by Gentry when he ran from the car.

Following the killing of Gentry, DeKalb county officers, under direction of Sheriff W. A. McCurdy, made no let-up in their efforts to find the man charged with the killing, arrests being made within a short time.

ing to pay a tax towards the maintenance of the government. I think it is better for them to take a little more interest in the expenses of the government and in the administration of its affairs. A man will do so if he contributes towards its support.

Senators favored the favored elimination of federal inheritance taxes, leaving that source of income to the states, which, he thought, should leave to the federal government the collection of income taxes.

Predicting that we will not take revision in the next session, he asserted that an attempt to change any of the rates would precipitate general revision, which he felt should be avoided. With the president having power to adjust rates upward and downward to the extent of 50 per cent, met my change in conditions, the present tariff, he said, should be considered stable for some time.

In a conference with the president tomorrow Senator Smoot hopes to obtain sufficient information to permit him to decide what his committee will do during the summer and fall in preparing for tax legislation at the next session.

Fifteen of the charges brought before the court were based on the finding of the board.

Decision Announced.

Judge Thomas announced the entire day in his court Thursday and his decision was announced late in the afternoon.

Arguments before the Georgia Securities commission ended Wednesday and members of the commission spent most of Thursday in hearing over records of the hearing. They announced early in the afternoon that they would not revoke the license of G. L. Miller & company.

"We are highly gratified at the victories we have won," Paul Arnold, secretary for G. L. Miller & company, said Thursday night. "Of course, there could have been no other outcome."

PLAN ANNEXATION OF COLLEGE PARK

The section is well developed, he said, and would add 1,000 persons to Atlanta's population, in addition to adding $1,500,000 worth of taxable property.

Councilman Sheppard also spoke in favor of the annexation, explaining that in addition to other advantages, East Lake children could attend Atlanta schools without paying tuition fees.

At present, the East Lake school extends only through sixth grade, he said, and children are forced to attend Atlanta schools for higher education, which is no alternative to paying tuition fees.

He made it plain, however, that Atlanta already has promised improvements to other sections which would come before East Lake, and that the proposed addition would not have fire and police protection, or water and sewer mains for several years.

Opposed Annexation.

Alderman James W. Armistead, also a member of the committee, was among the leaders opposing the annexation. He pointed out that the city is unable to furnish fire and police protection, with other improvements, and will not be in a position to do so for several years. The proposed addition will be annexed largely to the northwest, and there would be little advantage, either to residents of East Lake or of Atlanta, in addition to the territory.

Others who spoke against annexation included Edgar Negley, East Lake commissioner; W. J. Tilson and R. W. Crenshaw.

Those speaking on the opposite side took the view that citizens should be given the opportunity to express themselves at an election, and that council should not bar them if they desire to come into Atlanta.

Town Clerk Shearer, of East Lake, stated that the town's bonded indebtedness is $65,000, and that the tax rate is $1.50 on $100, or the same as Atlanta.

Petition Adversed.

Alderman Armistead, Alderman Johnson voted to adverse the petition, while Councilman Slattery favored granting it.

If council should adopt the minority report, and the city decided to annex East Lake, it would become part of the twelfth ward. Councilman W. E. Saunders, of the twelfth ward, the company's manager, police about 45 in number, charged the crowd, hoping to disperse it, but the men were either unaccustomed to horses or insufficiently trained, and the charge was not pressed. As horses lost their way in the crowd, aware of strikers surging around, they began to run, police said, and the charge started. In 15 minutes the power station was in the hands of the miners and its defenders had fled.

The mounted men were the center of a milling mob and some of them were able to retreat toward the town hall, others were driven off and ended in jail. Of the 24 arrested in this "anner," several were wounded, and all bore marks of battle.

Chief of Police Dan Graham refused to allow the wounded men to be taken to the hospital in the fear that they might be injured again.

They are now attempting to round up other members of the alleged gang which Brinkman is said to have led.

of a group of miners in the southern area of the Cape Breton coal fields.

Pickets of the United Mine Workers of America who had taken possession of the plant several days ago, returned to the baseball park where they were joined by hundreds of miners from collieries in the vicinity.

In the meantime the force at the station proceeded to consolidate their position by erecting barbed wire entanglements.

Defenders Desert Plant.

The police entered the plant about 4:30 o'clock in the morning. About noon a force of strikers estimated at 2,000 marched from the baseball park and surrounded the place, cutting off all communication with the outside. It was led by MacNeil, a member of the strike committee, who addressed the crowd, charging him with burglary, assault and battery, pointing a pistol at another and carrying concealed weapons. Trial of the case was docketed for Wednesday in Fulton superior court on a physician's statement that Leathers was ill résulted in the case when the fight started.

On April 28, according to police, Leathers and L. E. Fuller went to the home of Dietrick and engaged in a general row with Dietrick and Mrs. Clossowod.

Leathers is said to have stated that Dietrick sold him some white leghorn chicken to Mrs. Leathers, which proved to be inferior quality. This was given as the cause of the brawl.

When the fight started, it was testimony that the boy was a little chap and had been acting like a rascal when solved. He certainly acted decently when he sobered up after the dispute some time ago. He asked me to be lenient—and then this followed."

"I have a watch which I have never lost," he said, and the boy belonged to Leathers.

The woman I knew was Mrs. White.

White asked me to loan her some money on it, a good time ago, and I did. Later she told me to keep it. It was not given to me, and I never knew until now that Mrs. White was Mrs. Leathers.

Mrs. Alice E. Clossowod, at whose home Dietrich had a room, was absent at the time of the shooting, she stated. She said, however, that Dietrick and Leathers had been having trouble.

Many Objections Entered.

Hill's testimony was broken down by defense objections by the defense and arguments whispered to Judge Lynch out of earshot of the jury.

In one of the low-toned arguments,

Defense Counsel Stewart said the defense would show that Reichman's interest in the McCloud estate was aroused by ulterior purposes.

"When I asked Mrs. Attorney Crowe if he had any objection to the defense's contention that the court's action in the case was the cause of the boy's death, he said, 'No.'

VOLS BLANK CRACKERS IN FINAL GAME OF SERIES

Pipgras and Eichrodt Star In 6-to-0-Nashville Win; Dell Shows in Six Innings

BY H. C. HAMILTON.

Wheeler Dell, late of Brooklyn, Seattle and, perhaps, lesser points, made his debut for the Crackers Thursday with reverse English, which is a way of saying that the wheeler was licked when he started his first Southern league baseball game, the Nashville Vols treating the fair-sized audience to their idea of a beautiful occurrence—a 6 to 0 victory for Nashville.

Dell was not exactly what might be termed a failure. During his labors from the center of the diamond he pitched a fairly good game. With an ordinary run of luck, and, of course, a few necessary runs, he might have won, but after he had given way in the seventh to a pinch hitter and Pug Cavet ascended the mound the fire of the enemy was something terrific, to phrase it in a mild form. Base hits cluttered up the plate and extra runs pattered across the plate.

Pipgras and Eichrodt Star.

George Pipgras, our late fellow-townsmen, shared the honors of the farewell game with his outfieldsman, Eichrodt. Eichrodt was a man of unusual adhesion seen until Cavet ascended the mound. That is, Pipgras held the home guard scoreless while Eichrodt was chalking up the runs. The box score shows that Eichrodt enlivened his favorite figures with a single, double, triple and home run in his four appearances on the ball. That is accounted a very successful afternoon in any society.

The punch of the Crackers was lacking and their one attempt to score was one of the weakest yet placed on exhibition at Spiller field. It was running steps on the bad, managed before it was fairly started, although to the casual customer it might have appeared a fine starting point to bother the Vols considerably.

Up to the fifth inning only two hits had been registered off the Pipgras delivery, but in the fifth the Crackers got hold on one and laid it on the embankment in center field—a triple. Gazella, next up, smacked one back at Pipgras and some strange impulse caused Cullion to desert his safe station at third to beat Pipgras' throw to the plate. Just then, however, he believed that Pipgras would throw the ball away or suddenly lose control of his faculties and throw the ball somewhere else is only a matter of speculation, but apparently he did harbor such thoughts, for there he was, rapidly dashed off for the plate! The scandal came to mind and a run up, culminating with the base running demise of our young hero. Gazella had reached second on the play and Krehmeyer walked, but Dell obliged the enemy by socking into a double killing and there you are.

Vols Scored in Second.

The Vols established a one-run superiority in the second inning when Eichrodt showed first symptoms of his day amuck by slapping out a triple. He scored on a single by Burkett.

In the fourth this same Eichrodt led off with a single and was driven home by Parkinson's double.

The third run also was marked down to the credit of Mr. Eichrodt when he whanged one of Dell's fast ones to deep center field and made the circuit.

The dose of Dell and the resurrection of Cavet put the following on the board:

He will meet the winner of the match between Manuel Alonso and Leland H. Wiley, local player, for the championship Saturday.

TUNNEY WILL FIGHT JULY 10

Chicago, June 11.—(By the Associated Press)—G. M. Dunn, American light-heavyweight boxing champion, has been signed by James Mulligan, matchmaker, for a round bout at either East Chicago, Ind., or Aurora, Ill., on July 10, it was announced tonight. Tunney's opponent will be selected from the men offered to meet any one except Harry Wills or Tommy Gibbons, it was announced.

There is very little save words of sympathy to say for the Crackers. It begins to look very much like they had run into one of those conditions where a released pitcher turns out to be a nemesis. Pipgras, who was practically useless to the Atlanta club when he was a member of its pitching staff, is absolutely useless. This evening's attack on the Crackers was the third unsuccessful one he has launched since he went to Nashville, announced.

and only once have the Crackers been able to defeat him.

Pipgras held the Crackers to six hits, two of which probably were home runs, to surprise his captors. Murphy's hit in the sixth became so slow when the ball, apparently bounding into the waiting hands of Burkett, suddenly careened, struck the shortstop on the shoulder and rolled into a net at 7 o'clock.

Cullion's second hit also was of the spectators' variety, a wild throw past Tolson on the bag.

The contest was free from sensational features.

Little Rock will begin a series with the Crackers Friday.

THE HAWK

By DANE COLLIDGE

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

Dave Crabtree, known as the Hawk, has just been taken on as night border for the N.A. Cattle Company, in the Powder river district. Dull Knife Arrants, a small independent gentleman, rides up to the N.A. outfit and quarrels with the range boss, consequently, over the loss of cows. The company manager, Cato Clark, arrives at the scene, accompanied by his son, Dull. After a brief struggle, Arrants is beaten, but he quarrels to Clark and draws his gun on him, when the Hawk interferes and threatens to shoot Arrants if he doesn't put up his gun. After Clark's departure Connolly comes with the news that the fight is over. The Hawk, however, is still angry. Dull Knife Arrants has left the outfit but is always at her service. Clark offers to keep him on as one of his hired gunmen, but the Hawk refuses his offer, thereby making a bitter enemy.

INSTALLMENT V.
BULL HOOK.

The sun was sinking low and three days had passed before the Hawk turned once more towards town. A quixotic impulse had sent him back into the mountains to warn Dull Knife Arrants of his peril; but Dull Knife was gone and, traveling by night to avoid pursuit, the Hawk escaped from the hills. Mysterious horsemen were riding the trails, cattle were moving to and fro, and between the rustlers and Cato Clark's gunmen the mountain highways were doubly dangerous; but down on the plains, with the Big Horns to the west and the broad prairie trail leading north, Dove Crabtree rode openly until, late in the day, he came within sight of Bull Hook.

On the north side of the bridge, in the bar of the log hotel, the cattlemen and army officers foregathered; across the wide street, made doubly wide for ox teams to swing, the company cowboys held revel; while on the south side of the bridge the Lone Star saloon had become the rendezvous of the rustlers and settlers.

"You're a killer and a company spy."

But the Hawk, riding in alone, knew nothing of these distinctions, and he dismounted in front of the Lone Star saloon. There were twenty men inside, talking and drinking and playing cards, but when he stepped across the threshold a dead silence fell, and the barkeeper greeted him gruffly.

"Good evening, suh," returned the Hawk, glancing about at the hostile crowd which listened to his every word, "won't you join me? Or any of you gentlemen?"

The barkeeper slapped down a glass and set out the bottle, but the Hawk drank alone.

"Hot day," observed the barkeeper. "Looking for any one in particular? I see you're a stranger in town."

"Yes, suh, I am," acknowledged the Hawk with a smile. "This is the first time I've been in Bull Hook."

"I asked if you was looking for somebody!" repeated the barkeeper with asperity, and Crabtree glanced up at him sharply.

"Yes, suh, I am," he said, "if it's any of your business. What's the matter with you gentlemen, anyway?"

"We're all right," spoke up an old man who stood swaying against the bar, "but I know a Texas killer as fer as I kin see one; and, by grab, you ain't welcome here, nohow!"

"That's all right, dad," replied the Hawk; "if I'm not welcome I'll go elsewhere; but I'm surprised to hear any man speak against the state of Texas in a saloon by the name of the Lone Star. I'm from Texas, and I'm proud of it, but when you call me a Texas killer that's going a little too far."

"You're a killer and a company spy," declared the old man with drunken vehemence. "I know you, and I know who you're lookin' fer. You're lookin' for Dull Knife Arrants!"

"Well, now, that's a fact," admitted Crabtree honestly. "He's the very man I'm lookin' for."

"I saw you try to shoot him, right thar by the company wagon, when he was havin' that run-in with Old Cheaters; but let me tell you, young man, Dull Knife Arrants hez got friends, and you're standing among 'em, right now!"

"We're on to you," added the barkeeper in the silence.

The Hawk looked around at the scowling faces about him, and shook his head regretfully.

"Well, gentlemen," he said, "the drinks are on me, because I'll admit that circumstances are against me; but if any of you see Arrants him might tell him I want to see him."

He turned as he spoke and walked out of the saloon, his high heeled boots clacking briskly, as he stepped into the street the old man followed after him, shouting mauldin threats and oaths. The Hawk stopped and while he stood patiently ignoring the drunken abuse, two heads popped up above the rest. One was red and the other was black, a flaming red and an Indian black, and even without Boots Jackson's description, the Hawk would have recognized them as killers. They were Red Pipkins and Cultus Du Chey, Cato Clark's hired gunmen, and as he stood and took the cursing they grinned.

Having vented his spleen, the old rustler turned away, and as the crowd broke up, Dove Crabtree mounted his horse and rode across the bridge. But though the crowd dispersed, every man in the street kept his eye on the mysterious stranger and when the Hawk dismounted in front of the hotel, Red Pipkins and Cultus were there. They stood lounging in the doorway, a haughty smirk on their evil faces, and as Crabtree started to go in, Red Pipkins shoved him back and barred the way with his foot.

"No bad men allowed here," he announced, and like a flash the Hawk whipped out his gun.

"You get out of my way," he flared back, "or I'll bend this over your head." And as they separated he passed through the door.

The Hawk strode up to the bar, his green eyes glinting dangerously, and slipped his gun back in its place; but as he was drinking alone a few moments later Red and Curtiss stepped inside the door.

"Well, we've got you," taunted Pipkins, standing in front of the door, with his gun dangling low by his leg, and Crabtree halted and faced them. "If you're lookin' for trouble," he said, "I'm lookin' for trouble, too. Now you git out of that do' or in about a minute you'll be dusting the smoke out of your clothes."

"Aw, you ain't so bad," mocked Red Pipkins. "We jest seen you take a cussin' and your bluff is phony, savvy?"

"You get out of that do'" shrilled Hawk, a wicked gleam in his killing eyes, "or, by Gawd I'll kill the both of you."

He started toward them, his delicate hand raised, ready in an instant to go for his gun, and they parted and let him pass. Then, as he whirled to face them, they broke and ran for the back door, and with a rush the crowd came back.

"Wy, certainly I've killed them," returned the Hawk as they gathered about and questioned him eagerly. "I knew who they were, and who sent 'em too, and I've got no use for a murderer. Neveh see one yet that would stand up and fight, but if it's trouble they're lookin' for, I can accomodate 'em."

He paced up and down, muttering angrily to himself, and he was starting for the back door when it was jerked open in front of him, and Dull Knife Arrants stood glaring at him. His shoulders were thrown back, and his eyes were bright—too bright—as he fixed them on his enemy.

"I hear you're lookin' for me!" he challenged.

"Yes, suh, I am," responded the Hawk with a smile, "but I'm not lookin' for trouble, Mistuh Arrants. I'm friendly—if you are. There's my hand." He held out his slim, white hand, and Dull Knife glanced at it scornfully.

"I don't know you!" he declared, "and I don't want to! Where you goin' with that little gun?"

"Wy, there was a couple of worthless fellows came in here just now and told me I couldn't go out the do' I was going out to look for 'em, to tell you the truth, and run the cowardly hounds out of town."

"Who was that?" demanded Dull Knife curiously.

"Well, now, one was named Pipkins and the other was called Du Chey, unless I'm badly misinformed."

"What? Red Pipkins? I jest saw him going out."

Dull Knife's angry eyes changed and his tense shoulders relaxed.

"What're you fighting them for?" he asked.

"Wy, the low-down, trifling rascals wouldn't let me through the do'—"

"I thought you was a company man," burst out Dull Knife.

"No, suh, and never have been," answered Crabtree confidentially.

"And I'd like a few words with you, alone."

Dull Knife Arrants glanced about and looked at him again, then turned and opened the door.

"All right," he said. "Here's your chance to shoot me in the back."

And he led the way out through the passageway.

He strode ahead through boxes and barrels of empty bottles until they came to the edge of the creek; then, placing his broad neck against the trunk of a tree, he turned and faced the Hawk.

"Now shoot," he said. "What's the news?"

"Cato Clark is planning to kill you," warned the Hawk.

"I hope you didn't ride clear up to my ranch and back, jest to tell me that," jeered Dull Knife.

THE GUMPS—BREAK THE NEWS TO MOTHER

SCH! DON'T MAKE ANY NOISE—it's after eleven o'clock and I don't want mother to know you've been out so late.

I BELIEVE YOU BUT MOTHER MIGHT NOT UNDERSTAND SHE NEVER ALLOWS HER HUSBAND TO REMAIN OUT AFTER NINE—I DON'T WANT MOTHER TO THINK THERE IS ANYTHING WRONG IF SHE WAKES UP AND FINDS OUT THE TIME SHE MAY THINK YOU WERE AT THE CLUB—OR MAYBE SHE MIGHT THINK YOU WERE PLAYING CARDS—YOU KNOW MOTHER IS VERY STRAIT-LACED.

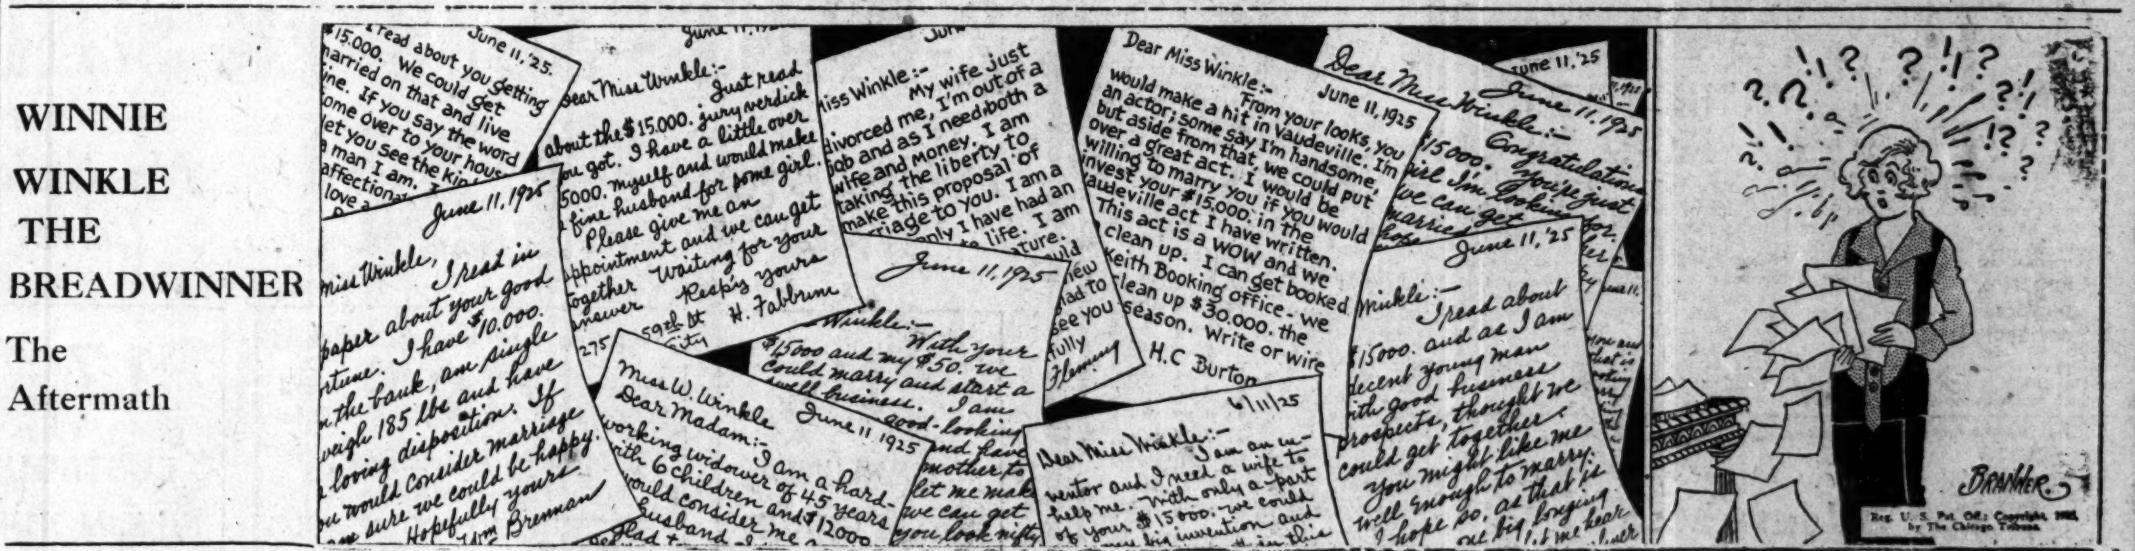

SAY, WHAT'S THE BIG IDEA? WHAT HAVE I DONE THAT MUST BE HIDDEN FROM MOTHER? IS SHE THE NATIONAL BOARD OF CENSORSHIP? DO I HAVE TO APOLOGIZE FOR COMING INTO MY OWN HOUSE? LET MOTHER WAKE UP AND I'LL TELL HER I'LL COME HOME WHEN I PLEASE—SHE MAY RING THE CURFEW BELL FOR HER HUSBAND AT NINE O'CLOCK BUT TELL HER THE ONLY BELL I PAY ANY ATTENTION TO IS THE LIBERTY BELL—AND I HOPE SHE'S LISTENING TO EVERY WORD—

MRS. WALKER TELLS CLUBWOMEN OF STATE'S SCHOOL NEEDS

Many Important Resolutions
Are Considered at Tallulah

By Bessie S. Stafford,

Editor Woman's Department, Atlanta Constitution.
Tallulah Falls, Ga., June 11.—(Special)—A stirring address by Mrs. Clifford Walker, wife of the governor, on steps necessary to improve educational facilities in the state and introduction of important resolutions featured today's sessions here of the first biennial council of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Action on the resolutions will be taken at the closing meeting Friday, at which time Augusta is expected to be awarded the next convention.

Resolutions introduced Thursday include: Indorsement of the movement inaugurated by the Atlanta Woman's club for the creation of a psychiatric department in the state's prison system; indorsement of the proposal launched by the Atlanta federation through its president, Mrs. T. T. Stevens, to mark World War camp sites in America; indorsement of the plan of the children's code commission to codify laws relating to children; expressions of gratitude to newspapers of the state and the Associated Press for helpful publicity; indorsement of Miss Molna Michael, of Athens, for a $500 prize for originating the poppy idea.

Mrs. Walker's Proposals.

Mrs. Walker asked members of the federation, who have already gone on record as indorsing the educational and highway program of Governor McCallum, to continue their efforts with the state's lawmakers before the approaching session of the legislature toward securing badly needed improvements in Georgia's school system.

As steps to be suggested to the legislators, Mrs. Walker mentioned the following:

"To pass a county unit law to permit one county system for all the schools in a county in order to give the rural school children the same advantages as those in the city."

"To provide an equalization fund to be distributed among the rural communities which are rich in children, but poor in wealth and cannot support good schools for their children without special aid from the state."

To double appropriations to our state university, agricultural technical and teacher training colleges, to provide decent training for leaders."

"To submit a bond issue for better colleges and school buildings."

"To pass the children's code commissions bills to protect dependent, neglected and delinquent children."

"To appropriate six cents per capita for public health so that the fight against preventable diseases may be carried on for the benefit of the children."

Press Thanked.

The resolution on the press expresses the sincere thanks and appreciation of the Federated Women's Clubs of Georgia for the widespread and continuous publicity given club work of the state, for publication of club activities by the newspapers and the Associated Press, and concludes:

"Therefore, as it is resolved, that we extend our thanks to the Federated Women's Clubs of Georgia."

Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan, state president of the Association of Georgia Mountaineers, presented a $150 scholarship for Tallulah.

Enjoyable Breakfast.

Mrs. Robert K. Rambo presided at the enjoyable breakfast, honoring the officers of Georgia federation and the state of Georgia at the Cliff House Thursday morning, at which original speeches and Tallulah school souvenirs were featured.

At the same hour the pupils of the Tallulah Falls school honored the district presidents at breakfast in the Lucy and Willard house. Miss Mary Woodberry, parliamentarian, presided over the class in parliamentary law.

The morning session held in the Anna Dooly auditorium, was presided

Georgia Clubwomen Dedicate Five New School Buildings

brilliant press dinner which on Wednesday evening assembled at the Cliff House. Outstanding members of the Georgia press, leaders in the state federation, and distinguished visitors from within and without the state who had gathered at Tallulah to participate in the greatest event since the organization of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs 28 years ago.

Mr. Brantley, president of the federation, wielded the gavel that brought the assembly to order. She paid a gracious tribute to the state press chairman, Mrs. McCord Robert, who had prepared a faithful, capable and delightful memoir of the state board and one of the most able of the press lieutenants the president had called about her in the beginning of her administration.

Mrs. Robert, who was toastmistress of the event, began with a personal expression of appreciation for the support which the press of the state had accorded her efforts. She spoke also of the efficient corps of press chairmen in the individual clubs and particularly of the district press chairmen, all of whom were invited to respond with a word of greeting. Among the most distinguished leaders present was Mrs. J. Lindsay John, of Rome, past president of the federation, a leader in organized woman's work since the beginning of Georgia's club history and cited by Mrs. Robert as the woman who 28 years ago had the vision to foresee the development of the state federation and who showed that vision to Clark Howell, with the result that the Atlanta Constitution has ever since given a full page each week unreservedly to the cause of federation work—the state federation's official page.

Mrs. Willard M. Patterson, chairman of publicity for the Tallulah and one of the featured speakers of the evening, cited Greater Tallulah as a monument alike to the power of organized womanhood and the power of the press, for, she said, without the organized, intelligent, resolute work of the women, no organization of planes would have been conceived, and without the support of the press they could never have been consummated. In her address Mrs. Patterson paid a tribute to Celeste Parrish, "that greatest of missionaries to the mountains," whose teachings throughout the length and breadth of Georgia, first at the state normal school and later as supervisor of rural education for the state, won thousands of converts for the cause of education for mountain children.

Press Representatives.
Fuzzy Woodruff, speaker for the press of Georgia, declared in a most timely and sparkling speech, that club women owed no debt of gratitude to the press for the press was to perform the service to which it was dedicated in fostering such enterprises as Tallulah Falls school.

Others who were presented for a word of greeting were Mrs. Ottley, president of the board of trustees, who said but for the press there would be today no "Greater Tallulah"; and Harlee Branch of the Atlanta Journal; Mrs. J. E. Walker, of the Macon Telegraph; Tipton Coffey, of the West Point Journal; Marion Keenick, of the Associated Press; and Linton K. Starr, head of the public relations department of the Georgia Railway and Power company, whose industrial and engineering development at Tallulah is doing much to help the school. Of particular interest was the presence of George A. Johnson, division manager of the Fox Film corporation in the south, through whose influence the Fox news sent Tracy Mathewson, expert cameraman, to Tallulah to record in moving pictures the schools and the dedication ceremony.

CAPITAL IN U. S. EXCEEDS DEMAND, BANKER DECLARES

Cleveland, Ohio, June 11.—(By the Associated Press)—Charles A. Otis, Cleveland investment banker, addressing delegates to the 18th annual convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers today, said the available capital in the United States is in excess of all demand.

"We have become the richest nation in the world ever saw, with available capital exceeding all demand," Mr. Otis said. "This situation has greatly increased the volume of securities and demand for securities, especially of the investment type."

He cautioned members not to plunge headlong into the construction of office buildings without pre-arrangements of rentals.

The building owners and managers were compelled to maintain conservative prices for the space they have to offer, since competitive buildings are attracted into the field by advancing prices for space.

About 900,000 pounds of reindeer meat will be shipped to the United States from Alaska this season.

Mrs. Rogers, of Tampa, Is Feted Guest of Mrs. Massenburg

Mrs. Hatton B. Rogers, of Tampa, formerly of Atlanta, is the charming guest of Mrs. F. J. Massenburg, at her home on North Boulevard. Mrs. Rogers has a host of friends here who are welcoming her with informal social affairs.

Mrs. Charles Marshall will give a luncheon today at her home on Brookhaven drive for Mrs. Rogers, and in the evening Mrs. Thomas Coke Mell will entertain at bridge.

Saturday Mrs. Robert Martin will be hostess at an informal luncheon at the Capital City club, and Saturday evening Mrs. Perry L. Blackshear will entertain.

Mrs. Royston Cabiness will compliment Mrs. Rogers Wednesday morning, June 17, and other affairs will be announced later.

During the past week this charming visitor has been honored at informal bridge-teas, luncheons, and dinners given by Mrs. Robert Strickland, Mrs. C. L. McKinney, Mrs. Sam DeLoach, Mrs. H. H. Harris, and Mrs. C. C. Cole.

Miss Louise Gay Honored at Parties.

The beautiful luncheon at which Miss Elizabeth Otis entertained Thursday at East Lake Country club was in honor of Miss Louise Gay, whose marriage to A. M. Boone will be a social event of June 17.

Garden flowers in lovely, bright colors were used as an attractive decoration for the luncheon tables. Guests included Miss Gay, Miss Amnette Gay, Miss Eleanor Gay, Miss Helen Shaw, of Washington, D. C.; Miss Elizabeth Dent, Miss Evelyn Knox, Miss Virginia Howard, Miss Rosalyn Lansford, Miss Mario Flattery, of New York; Mrs. Edgar Bullock, of Columbus; Rufus Le Grand, of Wilmington, N. C., and Mrs. Emily Walker Caldwell.

A delightful affair of Thursday afternoon was the trouser-tea at which Mrs. Pearl Mozeley Gay, Miss Eleanor Gay, Miss Annette Gay, and Miss Helen Shaw, of Washington, D. C., were hosts in honor of her daughter, Miss Louise Gay.

The members of the bridal party assisting in entertaining were: Mrs. Pearl Mozeley Gay, Miss Eleanor Gay, Miss Annette Gay, Mrs. Edgar Bullock, of Columbus, Ga., and Miss Helen Shaw, of Washington, D. C.

Miss Gay received her guests wearing a becoming model of white chiffon and a corsage of pink sweetpeas. The house was decorated with quantities of garden flowers.

The tea table was overlaid with an exquisite cover of real lace and an graceful center of the table was a crystal bowl filled with pink gladioli and lilies. Pink tapers were in crystal holders.

Forty guests called during the afternoon.

Reserve Officers To Entertain at Dance.

Of wide social interest in army and civilian circles is the announcement that a dance is to be given at the Service club at Fort McPherson by the officers who are on duty with the Three Hundred and Twenty-second, and the Three Hundred and Forty-sixth regiments of infantry of the organized reserves this evening.

Major E. P. Smith, assisted by Lieutenant R. Carson Hamlett, have charge of all the arrangements and the fact that the Oglethorpe orchestra will furnish the music adds much to the pleasure of the dance.

The guests will include all of the officers on duty with the Fourth corps area and many of the friends of the visitors.

Miss Minnie Cook To Wed George Tyler.

A marriage of wide interest throughout the state will be that of Miss Minnie Cook and George H. Tyler, formerly of Alexandria, Va., but now of Atlanta. The ceremony will be performed at high noon Sunday, June 13, at the residence of the sister and brother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Cook, on Oxford road.

Dr. J. W. Caldwell, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will be the officiating minister.

Miss Roberta Cook, maid of the bride, will be the maid of honor and Raymond Bagwell will be best man. Miss Ann Harrison will play the wedding march.

Miss Cook is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Phil Cook, her father having died four years ago, she has been secretary of state for General succeeding in that office his father, the late General Phil Cook, noted Confederate chieftain. Miss Cook is the niece of the late Mrs. William Lawson Peeler, one of the most brilliant of Georgia women.

Mr. Tyler, formerly of Alexandria, Va., a member of a prominent Virginia family, and now holds a prominent position with the Southern Bell Telephone company.

Miss Phoebe Ellis Honors Miss Tidwell.

A lovely affair of Wednesday, following the musicals of the Atlanta Music club, was the luncheon at which Mrs. A. F. Walker entertained at the Atlanta Biltmore in honor of two distinguished visitors.

The honor guests of the occasion were Mrs. Von Tressow, whose husband is consul at Africa, Chili, and Mrs. Eva Nash, of Knoxville, daughter of the noted surgeon, Dr. E. L. Nash.

Summer flowers adorned the center of the daintily appointed luncheon table. Covers were laid for Mrs. Von Tressow, Miss Nash, Mrs. George W. Wright, Mrs. C. E. Kauffman, Mrs. Violet Illges and Mrs. W. L. Walker.

Tea-Dance To Be Event of Saturday.

One of the largest tea-dances of the early summer season at the Biltmore will be held Saturday afternoon. Weather will be used. A two-hour dance concert, beginning at 5 o'clock, will be rendered by Warner's Seven Acos.

Among the reservations are the following: Miss Rosalind Linceford, Mr. and Mrs. Angus Perkinson, Mrs. A. W. Chase, Mrs. Broyles, J. W. Stoner and Dr. G. D. Ayer.

SAFETY POSTER PRIZES TO BE AWARDED TODAY

Safety poster prizes will be awarded today at the weekly meeting of the Atlanta Safety council in the chamber of commerce building. The prize winners will be honor guests. John T. Hancock, president of the board of education, will present the prizes. H. H. Hunter, assistant superintendent of schools, Miss Mary Powell, assistant superintendent, and Miss Charlotte Smith, supervisor of drawing in the elementary schools, will assist in the presentation exercises.

SLAMS AND SALAAMS

By Louise Dooly

MR. HUSBAND has been on his summer vacation only long enough to be restless for his business. He can't quite make up his mind that he has a right to be idle. He just knows things must be going wrong at the office.

Then, too, he doesn't play golf.

His wife has been working overtime to keep him amused.

Yesterday she got out of patience. "It's a pity," she burst out, "you didn't learn in early youth to bite your finger nails. It would give you something congenial to do now."

ITS REWARD.

INITIATIVE? Yes, it's a virtue. But it's always the person with initiative who gets on first and has the street car fare.

REFORMS THAT WON'T HAPPEN.

MEN have wasted a lot of breath lately about women.

There were the doctors for instance in a medical convention who broadcashed the evils of cosmetics for women and high-heeled shoes.

MOVIE MIRTH.

THE unseasonable hot weather had its mitigation, too, in the mirth-compelling announcement by a movie director we had never heard of (but that does not make him unknown), who is seeking for a "fade-out finale" in his films, a substitute for the kiss. People, he says, no longer get a thrill out of kisses.

Well, dead people don't.

RADICALISM.

THE organized women of America, we are told from time to time by so-called defense societies, guardians of liberty, etc., are a menace to the country.

They are pacifists who would destroy by their pernicious propaganda national support of national defense needs.

Or they are extreme radicals financed from Moscow.

Then the General Federation of Women's Clubs meets out in West Baden. There the girls love their country a little or they wouldn't congregate in Indiana in the summer time.

And what are the Bolshevik explorations that emanate from this dangerous gathering?

Why, stentorian calls to the country to consider the state of the American home; to study conditions within the family; to improve conditions there and conditions around it which tempt the young people away; urging of city women to return into the rural districts the club life enjoyed by the city women, and such like.

"The federation," says the president, Mrs. John D. Sherman, a woman who stands on the foundation of the most intelligent conservatism, leavened by the initiative which seeks out new ways for promoting the welfare of the old virtues—virtues like love and service which cannot be supplanted; "the federation," says Mrs. Sherman, is topsy-turvy with city girls. We need the rich and fundamental things the rural women can give us and we feel that we can likewise aid them."

If this be radicalism, make the most of it.

THE MODEL HUSBAND.

AND what's this? The American girl of the day who, we are told so often is tottering on the brink of destruction and dragging the young men with her, that we almost view the situation with alarm—this young girl declaring her ideal of a husband is the decorous man?

But that's what the coeds at the University of California answered in a newspaper.

"For husbands they want 'men who are respectable without being good-yoody, and who have a decorous attitude towards life and its recognized institutions.'

We've got to believe it, because we saw it in the paper.

THE "SCIENTIFIC" ATTITUDE.

READING—(if necessary, because there is so much published on the subject)—reading after people who take their religion only intellectually, we have come to the conclusion, in all reverence, that what they seem to be trying to do is to psycho-analyze God.

A SALAM TO MARIE.

WE HAVE never been presented at court.

But we have very positive ideals about the deference due authority.

And so we have cheerfully seen this column of uplift give way daily for a week to what the Queen of Rumania thinks we Americans think and why she thinks we ought to think the way she thinks.

"Pour aux Relines," we have responded to ourself amiable. But

There has revived in our mind that mooted economic question: Should the woman who is not obliged to work for a living crowd the woman who does?

We thought we had long ago settled it in the affirmative. Survival of the fittest.

But when any abstract problem, no matter how otherwise, becomes a personal problem, then (to be quite economically technical), the shoe is on the other foot.

However, we are at least philosophic.

We felt ill for a week, so—"Go to

Fischer-Pangborn Wedding Lovely Afternoon Event

One of the loveliest of the June weddings was that of Miss Marguerite Fischer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Astor Fischer, and Walter Allen Pangborn, which was solemnized Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, 1325 Highland avenue, Morningside park.

Dr. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of the First Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a group of relatives and close friends of the bride and groom.

Decorations.

Beautiful decorations of gladioli were used throughout the house. The ceremony was performed in the living room in front of the fireplace, which was banked with palms, ferns and similar large baskets of variegated greenery were placed around it.

On either side of the improvised altar tall cathedral candelabra were placed holding white burning tapers.

The nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Fred Becker, cousin of the bride.

To the strains of the wedding march from "Love Never Dies" the bride, Mrs. E. H. Lovell, matron of honor, and only attendant, entered alone, wearing a charming gown of light blue chiffon made with a tight, short waist and a circular skirt. It was trimmed with streamers of velvet ribbons of the same shade. She wore a large blue picture hat. She carried the bouquet which she begins either to a pucker or else a bow.

If you are under 27 years of age you need not bother about this unless you have been very ill, but if you are 27 or thereabouts keep a very careful watch over this part of your face. The skin is inclined to be dry you will notice more and then a series of little lines or pockers radiating from the throat toward the chin. If your skin is oily, and particularly if you are overweight, you will notice slight bagginess as though a little pocket of extra flesh were forming under the skin.

Begin your treatment in either case by washing the face with soap and very hot water, holding a face cloth wrung from hot water over the part to be treated. Then if the skin is dry, use flesh building cream, but if it is merely oily, use cleansing cream.

Massage the skin with fingers and forth from the chin down the throat. Take a small piece of ice, and having first wiped off the cream rub the skin with the ice, rubbing it back and forth against the skin for five or ten minutes. Wipe dry and powder. You will be surprised how young and smooth and fresh all that part of the face looks.

If this condition is new, a treatment once a week is sufficient, but if the chin is very bad two or even three times a week is better.

WHERE OLD AGE SHOWS.

WHERE OLD AGE SHOWS. First in wrinkles around the corners of the eyes, less often by lines that run down each side of the mouth. But one absolute give away of approaching middle age few women see. That is the place just under the chin, where the chin line runs into the neck. The skin here begins either to a pucker or else a bow.

Beauty Seeker—Your hair in childhood must have been the flaxen gold which always changes to brown as you grow older, and your little sister will likely have the same experience as you have had with yours. If you could do anything to keep it that she would not be becoming to you after adult age. Your weight of 104 pounds at 15 years of age with a height of five feet, four inches, is all right if you are in good health, as you are growing tall first and will likely fill out and increase your weight after you reach your height.

FINAL RITES TODAY

FOR THOMAS RYAN

Funeral services for Thomas W. Ryan, 55, assistant foreman of the Atlanta Steel mills, who died Wednesday will be held this afternoon at the Sacred Heart church. Father Phillip Hasson will officiate. The body will be sent to Sandusky, Ohio, for interment.

Mr. Ryan was born in Sandusky, but had been living in Atlanta for a number of years. He was a member of the Sacred Heart church, the Knights of Columbus, and of Atlanta Lodge No. 78, B. P. O. E.

He is survived by two nieces in Sandusky. He lived at a local hotel.

Roots and Herbs Used in Medicine

The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., of Lynn, Mass., is recognized as the greatest user of roots and herbs in the world. Over a half million pounds are used annually in manufacturing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. These herbs are gathered with the greatest care at the season of the year when the medicinal elements which they contain are at their best. This, in part, accounts for the wonderful reputation of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in restoring ailing women to health and strength. (adv.)

Radiant Bride.

The bride, who was lovely in her handsome ensemble suit of brown bengaline trimmed with brown fox fur, entered with her father, who gave her in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, R. E. Stanford.

She wore hat of cocoa shade trimmed with feathers from robin red-breast, corsage of bride's roses and valley lilies.

An informal reception followed the ceremony.

Mrs. R. E. Stanford, sister of the bride, kept the bride's book. She was gowned in cocoa shaded georgette. Mrs. Fischer, mother of the bride, wore a handsome gown of orchid georgette.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Pangborn left for Asheville, N.C., where they will spend their wedding trip. On returning home they will make their home at 126 East Eleventh street, in the Piedmont Park apartments.

Families of Note.

Mr. and Mrs. Fischer are the parents of the former Amahs-and-Wiedfeldt, when he returned to Germany not long ago, that, "Whenever three American women get together, the inevitable result is uplift."

American women certainly won't quarrel with him about that impression, even though he smiled when he said it.

FORCE VERSUS LOVE.

HE PAID tribute to America for its idealism, but "On the other hand, no country equals yours in the passage of many laws. You turn out laws in quantities as you do auto-motives."

And that recalls the droll philosophy of Wm. E. "Punyfoot" Folger, son who is expert for revolution and legal outlawing of a vice which he admits the East Indians have never had. Their religion preaches total abstinence, and that has been

"When America went dry," says Mr. Johnson, "these people were stirred to their depths because they saw that America, the most advanced nation in the earth, had not only adopted the Oriental teachings as to drink, but had actually written them into law."

There are several amusing errors in his statement.

New York, June 11.—Moderate rallies developed in the cotton market today on complaints of inadequate supplies from drought in central Texas and reports of better trade demand October at 22.65 or 25 points net higher than close at 22.52. The general market closed steady at net advances of 8 to 12 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 2 points on July but generally 4 to 6 points higher in sympathy with railroads. Liverpool cables, reports of an increased supply from Liverpool and talk of rather better demand for cotton in the local market yesterday. The demand was not general or aggressive and fluctuations of realizing caused early irregularity, with July relatively easy on runs. Large buyers were likely on the first note.

Failure of the detailed weather reports to show any signs of consequence in the central belt sent active months 17 to 25 point net higher early in the afternoon. July selling up to 22.98 but outside of 24 cents. The crop was believed to be making good progress and the gain was not fully maintained.

PORT & FLAGG.

New York, June 11.—The early market was steady while problems of oil sales on selling for oil companies the tone remained stable though July was relatively weak. There are no signs of recovery in the market. New York was about Havana Electric, although statements to that effect were denied by American and Foreign Power. The market was steady in the absence of the pressure which was noticeable yesterday and the day before in the company securities. American low-priced rails, Western Maryland was taken in good hands, based on the statement that they had been sold to another important line. Industrial stocks also have their own problems. They have shown short or less of late and have been sold off again. Their recent loss and was brought back to a level not far from its recent high. However, it was more evident that the market expected more in this group had a slight drop. General Petroleum, on which heavy turnover moved up several points. Independent and small stocks were also steady. It was said to be due to accumulation by interests associated with a prominent actor. Among the motor accessory group a slight further rise was observed. The market which has felt the stimulus of the automobile industry prosperity. There was quite an increase in the activity and advances were well held.

The report that the production of motor cars and trucks in the United States during May totalled 404,300, according to preliminary estimates of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, reveals a slight decline in automotive manufacturing activity. The May total was 4 per cent under 421,825 cars and trucks, but at the same time was 33 per cent ahead of the May of 1924, a point. Furthermore, the estimates show that the number of automobiles manufactured during the month just gone was greater than the output of any other month on record. April of this year alone exceeded 410,000 units.

As a reflection of the activity in automobile manufacturing circles, automotive securities on the New York stock exchange have been booming. Four-quarter reports of leading producers and promises of excellent earnings during the rest of the year have stimulated a general demand for motor securities which has boosted prices sharply until they have now reached a point where caution is advised by the leading financial authorities. It is pointed out that many motor stocks are selling far above the prospects for returns as evidenced by earnings per share, although these earnings are generous.

It is always a question as to what course may best suit the position of those who are holding stocks. It is probable that they have no definite plan themselves but will be guided by developments as they arise.

The accepted view as to the crop is that with the exception of about one-third of the Texas area it presents a promising aspect. Call money renewed at 3 3-4 per cent on the stock exchange with the rate outside down to 3 1-2 per cent.

As a result of the large accumulation of investment funds, bankers offering the $50,000,000 30-year Belgian government 7 per cent bonds at 98 to yield 7.45 reported that the market was going well.

WEATHER FORECAST FOR COTTON STATES

Louisiana—Friday and Saturday, partly cloudy; probably local showers in south portion.

Arkansas—Friday and Saturday, partly cloudy; little change in temperature. Oklahoma—Friday, partly cloudy; probably showers and cooler in the Panhandle portion.

East Texas—Friday, partly cloudy; scattered showers near coast; Saturday, probably showers.

West Texas—Friday, partly cloudy; probably showers and cooler in the Panhandle portion.

Saturday, partly cloudy, cooler except in southeast portion.

WALL STREET BRIEFS

The dull and narrow trend of stock transactions yesterday was an exhibition of a regular summer market being virtually a stalemate with professionals competing for small profits in absence of public participation. The weakness of railroad shares, chiefly high-grade issues, was said to be due to a recent heavy liquidation in European markets owing to the financial situation there.

The quarterly dividend of $1 on the preferred stock of the Wanner Malleable Castings company, due at this time, has been deferred. The issue is cumulative.

Pittsburg Plate Glass company has declared an extra dividend of 5 per cent payable October 1 to stock of record September 15. Two regular quarterly dividends of two per cent also were authorized, payable July 1 and October 1.

CHICAGO COTTON.

Chicago, June 11.—Cotton averaged about 15 points above yesterday's final for day and ended with a net gain of six points for July and four for October. Most of the market was centered on the market of central Texas to get any rains and only scattered showers over remainder of the country.

July was offered more freely here and the premium of that month dropped from yesterday's 12.73 to 10.00 over October.

Much of the buying was for the market which came from sheets covering but there was also a fair amount from traders buying for the rainy season.

The market is a day-to-day affair with trading limited to 100,000 barrels a day.

There are steady, well-organized markets about 25 points net higher the market met somewhat freer offerings but reactions were not strong enough to inspire much fresh buying in the face of favorable crop conditions. The market was relatively easy and the drop in Texas seemed sufficient to hold the market. July was relatively easy and the premium over October accompanied by rains that heavy tenders were foreign to the market.

Interest rates were creditable, with foreign trade interests were credited with a favorable start in new-crop month here today.

Women's Love of Finery Laid To Desire To Attract Men

Wish for Beautiful Clothes Bred in Blood of Fair Sex and Shows Itself in All, From Milkmaids to Queens, Romanian Ruler Says.

This is the eleventh of a series of articles by Queen Marie, of Romania, written exclusively for The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance. She gives a frank and intimate way her thoughts of life, love and work. The series marks the first time that a reigning member of royalty has written under his or her own signature for a newspaper.

A QUEEN LOOKS AT LIFE.

By Queen Marie of Romania.

CHAPTER XL

Clothes and the Woman.

Clothes! perhaps a frivolous but oh, what an important subject, one that through all ages has played an almost incredible part in human history.

Looking back along the centuries we see a never-ending pageant of color like a long, long dress parade in which every possible form of dress is represented from Mother Eve's figleaf which cost her nothing, to Marie-Antoinette's stupendous hoops which seem to have encumbered France's finances.

And all along the line that desire of woman for clothes, finery, for decking her beauty, enhancing her charms, or of covering up her deficiencies, her imperfections, with fine clothes, fine stuffs, attire, adornments—the desire to please, charm, dazzle, attract.

To attract what? Man, no doubt. That was the primitive fundamental reason and has remained much the same through all the ages, for always will it be instinctively woman's principal object: to attract man.

The ultra-modern, civilized woman may perhaps think of this less than her more primitive sister, but the desire for clothes, for dress, remains the same. It is a ground upon which all women, white or black, old or young, good or bad, clever or stupid, rich or poor, royal or plebeian, can meet.

Clothes—Dress.

Strangely enough in nature, amongst animals, it is the male who does all the dressing—who wears the feather, who flaunts his colors, spreads his tail, sings the song which is to attract.

Peacock, pheasant, cock, stag, stallion, lion, bull, the show specimen with all he had not on these official occasions, made myself as beautiful as possible and the smiles that greeted me were more or less radiant according to how successful I had been.

The further east one goes, the greater is the love for finery. My people would have been sadly offended with what I not on these official occasions, made myself as beautiful as possible and the smiles that greeted me were more or less radiant according to how successful I had been.

I can now still, when looking back, see many of the dresses, cloaks or hats I wore on those great feasts. Luckily Nature had given me a face my people were fond of. I was fair-haired and blue-eyed in a manner more nearly everybody was drawn to the typical Virginia style which makes no distinction between a formal banquet and the simplest supper. There was delicately broiled ham and cold chicken and hot biscuits with honey and strawberries red and luscious, fresh from the garden served with thick yellow cream.

After supper, the entire household adjested to the feast and sat there in the scented darkness listening to the sound of the crickets and the call of the whip-poor-will on the hillside drifted the plaintive lullaby of a darky mother who rocked her baby to sleep. Presently the moon rose, a silver disk between the poplars.

As in all such reversal of fortune, Mrs. Marlowe was now glad she had kept up the relationship, and she was conscientious enough to be penitent for her patronage of former days.

Jane, arriving at the Duley's in the fragrant dusk of a June day, thought she had never seen anything so restful and charming as the old white house with the green blinds, set well back in galleries where flowers grew riotously. There were popular trees at the edge of the garden where birds nested, uttering soft sounds of contentment. The scent of clover came from the rolling meadows and far away on the hillside was the tinkling of sheep bells.

The peaceful scene affected Jane deeply after her stormy life in New York. And the peace and roar of the days that were mad rush in an effort to crowd forty-eight hours of activity into twenty-four, she found of the little Virginia household as beautiful as a dream from which she did not wake.

Her mother was looking happy and almost rosy after a month of good country air and food. Jane did not spoil her pleasure by telling her why she was not at her work in New York.

The Dulaneys were cordial in their welcome; they extended her true Virginia hospitality. She ate a typical meal, a deliciously prepared and served in the typical Virginia style which makes no distinction between a formal banquet and the simplest supper.

With the assurance that she was not giving up reputation, which provided a home for her mother and herself, she closed her little apartment and set out for Virginia.

Her mother was already there, visiting some distant relatives for the summer months. Jane had met these kindly people when she was a child but had never seen them since. Mrs. Marlowe had kept the relationship in close touch and her prosperity had looked rather apprehensively at their occasional visits to her, for they were southerners of the old school, charming and cultured but shabby as an aftermath of the war. They hardly fitted to the smart luxury and ultra-modern frivolity of the Marlowe menage.

As in all such reversal of fortune, Mrs. Marlowe was now glad she had kept up the relationship, and she was conscientious enough to be penitent for her patronage of former days.

"Do you ride, Jane?" her host asked her.

"A little, but I haven't for years." "What a fool I am," she thought, "haven't I better things to do, more meaningful things, than to learn mooring a gate like a sixteen-year-old girl?"

She went back to the house, still smiling at her own folly.

Scott Johnson, Atlanta sales manager of Atlanta and Pacific Tea company, announced Thursday that the Avondale store of the chain will be formally opened Saturday with special attractions for shoppers.

H. C. Humphries has been appointed manager of the new store. Mr. Humphries formerly was connected with A. & P. stores in Decatur, and is well known to the trade territory to be served by the Avondale establishment.

"We consider the new store in Avondale Estates one of the finest in our system and we expect it to prove one of our busiest," Mr. Johnson said.

SIX PERSONS HURT WHEN CARS COLLIDE LATE WEDNESDAY

Six persons, 5 women and one man, were slightly shaken up and bruised when two automobiles collided late Wednesday night in Rose circle. The injured are J. D. Baker, 76 Elbert street, and two women, who gave their names as Mrs. Prather and Mrs. Huff, of 21 West Alexander street, who were occupants of her car driven by Baker, according to police, and Mrs. Charles Baird and a Mrs. Thompson both of Rose circle, in a car driven by Mrs. Baird.

The accident was investigated by Call Officers Brown and Maddox and charges of reckless driving were docketed against Mrs. Baird and Baker, drivers of the two cars. None of the injured were taken to a hospital, police records show.

The names of travel stopped at once. No other remedy has ever received such general acceptance among the public as the effects of its use means relief and comfort.
